Kellogg's STRAWBERRIES

For Eating — Freezing — Canning — Profit

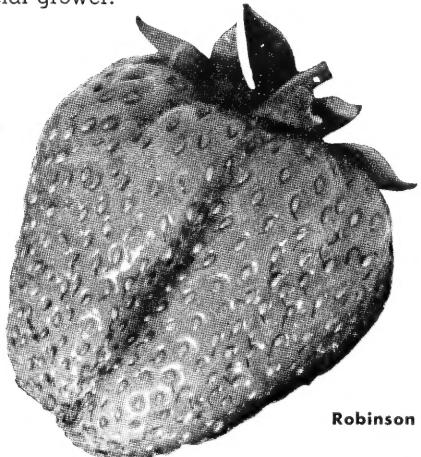

CATSKILL

A leader among all midseason varieties. Catskill produces more quarts of larger berries than any other variety. The berries are extra large and the flavor extra fine, mild and sweet. Fruit is bright, shiny red holding their color very well. This is one of the most productive varieties, vigorous and healthy. The plants have rich, waxy foliage and the fruit is produced on long picking stems. It is a sure cropper and ranks next to Premier in this respect. It is a good plant maker and the berries can stand wet weather at harvest time better than most varieties.

Catskill is probably the best strawberry for freezing. When frozen the berries retain their rich red color, flavor, and are still of firm shape. Catskill is warmly recommended for all northern sections of the country. A top notch variety for the home gardener and the commercial grower.

ROBINSON

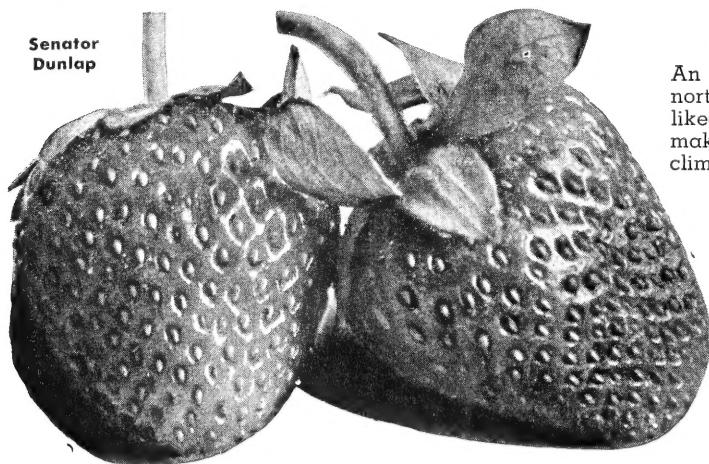

Catskill The best medium to late bearing variety . . . 10 days to two weeks later than Premier. The berries are extra-large, bright red, conical in shape and well colored to the very center having a honey-sweet flavor. Quality and firmness are very good making it an excellent shipping variety. Plants are healthy, producing many plants for a good fruiting row; in fact, they often must be thinned somewhat for best results. A wonderful berry that is fast becoming very popular for canning and table use and excellent for shipping to distant markets. This variety has been grown commercially in northern areas for the past ten years and has produced wonderful crops of fruit every year under the most unfavorable conditions. A variety well worth trying.

Robinson

FAIRFAX

This name has long been associated primarily with quality and flavor. In fact, for sheer eating pleasure Fairfax has long been regarded as the very best variety in the world. Firm, ruby-red berries that turn dark purplish when fully ripe. This darker color is a mark of quality to retail buyers; after their first taste of the delicious fruit, customers look for the distinctly darker berries. They are fan shaped at first, then normal shape. Sturdy plants bearing a fairly heavy crop. Not so productive as Premier, but growth is vigorous and enough plants are produced to make a fine fruiting row. Non-acid, distinctive taste that is a favorite everywhere. Brings high prices on every market all through the middle and northern states.

SENATOR DUNLAP

An older variety that has been grown in the middle and northern states for many years and is still grown and liked by many people. The hardiness of Senator Dunlap makes it especially adaptable to coldest and warmest climates which often injures weaker varieties and to poorest soil conditions. The berries are medium large, conical in shape, and dark red in color all the way through and of good quality. Flavor is very sweet — requires very little sugar. Plants are unusually healthy, very prolific and makes a solid fruiting row. A very strong, high-yielding plant. This is one of the best sorts for canning purposes. A bi-sexual sort, best grown in narrow rows. Commercial growers and home gardeners alike can profit by planting Senator Dunlap. For quality berries, try a planting this season.

Kellogg's Honor Roll DAHLIAS

Large-Flowered Varieties

Sturdy, showy Dahlias contribute their full share to the late summer and autumn garden. For generations they have been among the favorite flowers for exhibition, for some types reach an enormous size. Like other plants, they have been greatly improved in recent years by hybridizers who have introduced many new forms and colors. Dahlia tubers are planted in spring when frost is over. They need a location in full sun, in moist but well-drained soil. Too rich a soil is to be avoided. The crowns of the tubers are set 4 to 6 inches below the ground surface. Plants should be staked securely to prevent wind damage. Largest flowers are obtained if side buds are removed from the stems and feedings of liquid manure given as the buds begin to form. After frost has killed the foliage, the tubers should be taken up, dried well and stored for winter. From the long list of Dahlia varieties, we have chosen a representative group of top-notch large-flowered varieties and pompons.
